

ABSTRACT

A device which is used to control the electronic temperature in an ECR plasma chamber includes at least one moderator which is placed in the path of electrons having an energy greater than a pre-determined energy, so as to form an obstacle to the electrons. The invention is suitable for use in ion sources and plasma machines.